next step toward maturity is to widen your circle of friends to include a few people you like.

Dear Ann: I'm a bachelor, 47, not bad looking, high school educated and employed by the City Transit Company. I hope you won't think I'm a nut. I need help with a very personal problem.

Newspapers are my hobby and I buy half a dozen out-of-town papers every weekend for fun. Three months ago I picked up a big city paper and read an interesting ad in the personals:

"Widow, 38, financially independent, wishes to correspond with respectable single man. Object, friendship. Must be willing to exchange photographs."

For a laugh I sent my picture to this woman and also a nice letter. When her picture arrived I was surprised. She was very good looking.

We've exchanged 34 letters and I find myself thinking of her night and day. She wants me to quit my job and move out to get "better acquainted." She has a nice home and has offered to rent me a room in it till I get some work lined up. I know it sounds crazy, but I've never felt this way about any woman before. Do you think I may have something?—ROY

Dear Roy: Yeah—you may have something—strudel in the noodle. A man who would quit his job to follow up a mail order romance has a loose connection somewhere.

If you think your pen pal has possibilities, go out there on your next vacation and STAY IN A HOTEL. Meet her family, friends and clergyman. Get acquainted. But don't be too hopeful.

When a "financially independent woman of 38" must advertise in a newspaper for friends—something's wrong.

Dear Ann: I'm 17 and have an unusual problem. I happen to like nice clothes and my folks can afford to see that I have the best. A certain girl at school whose mother is a dressmaker has shown up in two dresses exactly like mine. Her mother makes them and they are pretty good imitations. To make matters worse, we are the same height and both blondes. When someone called me by her name yesterday I decided it was time to write to you. What can I do?—COPIED

Dear Copied: Nothing—so enjoy the compliment. Imitation is the most sincere form of flattery. Dresses that cost hundreds are copied every

Collecting Recipes At Meetings Is Her Hobby

A collector of "friends' recipes," Mrs. James McClure of 1629 Cota Ave., who has been an active clubwoman both in West Virginia and locally, attributes her hobby to the fact that "you can't attend many club meetings without picking up some interesting recipes."

When she adds a new recipe to her collection, she labels it with the giver's name to help her remember her hostess whenever she prepares the dish.

A native of Charleston, W. Va., Mrs. McClure came here 3 1/2 years ago when her husband was transferred by Union Carbide. After residing in Redondo for the first 18 months, where she was a member of the Redondo Woman's Club and the South Bay Garden Club, the family moved to their present address. The McClures have two sons, James, 16, and John, 12.

President of the Torrance Elementary PTA for a second term, Mrs. McClure was at one time an accordionist with an all-girl orchestra. In West Virginia she served as president of a home demonstration club for four years.

Besides cooking, her hobbies are painting, piano, organ, and bowling.

She anticipates adding several new recipes to her collection shortly as a result of an 8,000 mile proposed six-week trip to Texas, Florida, West Virginia, and Pennsylvania, which she will leave on in two weeks.
